The outgoing officers are: village trustees Ona E. McGovney, Edward Schenkel, Albert Braun. Village Clerk, Karl E. Krapp. They have all filed their petitions for re-election. Thus far there is no opposition to them.

Roth Defeated In New Lenox Twp.

New Lenox township had a red hot town election Tuesday when a total of 516 votes were cast, said to have been a record for the township. The hot fight centered on the office of highway commissioner. Ernest Oram, candidate for re-election on the regular town ticket received 387 votes. Norman Roth who ran on the independent ticket received 73 votes. A large number of ballots had to be thrown out because they were not properly marked. Ceward Batson was re-elected town clerk without opposition. A special ballot for levying a special tax for gravel roads also carried.

R. I. SENDS 100 MEN TO MO- KENA LAYING NEW RAILS

The Rock Island will be a bee hive of industry at Mokena during the next week or so. Already a big string of work cars have been placed on a new sidetrack and a 100 men will be located here while new steel rails are being laid from New Lenox to Blue Island.

Mrs. J. V. Hall Enters Race.

The next big local election of special interest in Mokena is that of school director. This election will be held on Saturday evening, April 14. Two candidates are in the field. Richard Hensel is seeking re-election with Mrs. J. V. Hall as the opposing candidate. A very lively election is anticipated.

Auto Skids Hits Pole

Electric light and power in New Lenox, Mokena and Frankfort was shut off Wednesday afternoon as the result of an auto skidding on the Lincoln highway pavement at New Lenox and running into a Public Service Company pole, breaking it off. The car was badly smashed but as far as could be learned no one was hurt.

Don C. Hall Puts Pep In Ending Campaign

Don C. Hall of Mokena, candidate for state representative on the Republican ticket, is making a whirlwind finish of his campaign this week. He has visited nearly every city and village in DuPage and Will Counties and has been speaking at from five to six meetings every night in Joliet or other parts of the county. From all indications he will receive a heavy vote in both counties. Mokena, his home precinct is being urged to go strong for him. Every voter is being urged to give him three votes.

Mr. Hall is a convincing speaker and if nominated and elected he will make a representative to be proud of. He is receiving the endorsement of the intelligent voters of both Will and DuPage counties.

Public Service Extends Lines

The Public Service Company has had a force of men and a digging machine at work setting poles for the extension of their light and power line from Mokena north on the Wolf road to the Maple road and on west to Marley the past week.

Farmers along the way are signing for electrical service. The extension of this line opens quite a large new field and if the McIntosh subdivision north of Mokena is ever opened another new territory will be added.

Clark Wins By Big Majority

One of the hardest fought town elections in years was waged in the town of Bremen Tuesday when the fight on the highway commissioner-ship of Bremen township was decided. The fight was a three cornered one and brought out a big vote. The contending candidates were Herman Siemsen, Bert H. Fulton and John Clark. The result was as follows:

John Clark 1438
Bert H. Fulton 993
Herman Siemsen 73

Clark's plurality 435
Mr. Clark has been highway commissioner for a number of years has been re-elected for a five year term.

Big Wind Up Emmerson Meeting Saturday Night

The big fight on the governorship between Len Small and Louis Emmerson in Will County is drawing to a close and a number of red hot last minute meetings on the eve of the primary on Tuesday, April 10 are being arranged for and one of these stem winding meetings will be held at the St. Mary hall in Mokena on Saturday night of this week when another Emmerson meeting will be held. The voters have been misled by Small propaganda that hard road construction will only be continued if Small is returned. Attend this meeting and learn that Emmerson will build hard roads and more mileage than Small if he is nominated and elected governor. Don't let any one tell you that only one man can build hard roads as such statement is the bunk. The rousing meeting scheduled for Saturday night of this week is for the purpose of giving the voters information on any question they may be in doubt on so they can vote intelligently on Tuesday, April 10. It is expected that this meeting will be equally as successful as the first Emmerson meeting held here a few weeks ago was. The ladies are especially invited. Be sure and attend this meeting and bring your neighbors and friends as it will be well worth your while. Remember the date Saturday night, April 7th at St. Mary's hall, Mokena.

New Lenox is having a growth not only in population but in the business way too. The latest new enterprise to enter the local field is a lumber yard and hardware store which is being opened in the Brookwood Park subdivision by George J. American Forest Week, 1928

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE week of April 22 to 28 has been designated as American Forest week in a proclamation by President Coolidge, and all Americans are urged to do their share in a proper observance of this week. It is noteworthy that among all the multifarious "weeks," set aside for special observance by this group or that organization which has a special interest in having their particular week "observed," American Forest week is the only one to which the federal government has given recognition and support. For it is not a tool for advancing the views or serving the purposes of any special group or organization. It does not identify itself with any particular program, but seeks to make better known certain essential facts about the forestry situation in this country and to promote discussion of this problem from every angle. Being strictly educational in plan and purpose and seeking to serve the best interests of the whole people, it is one "week" which every American citizen can "observe" conscientiously and should observe as a part of his civic duty.

The idea of devoting seven days in the year to public education on forestry matters originated on the Pacific coast eight years ago. In 1921 President Harding issued the first proclamation which brought the influence of the government behind the idea. When Calvin Coolidge became President he also gave his sanction to the plan and he has issued a proclamation for American Forest week every year since that time. Many governors have also issued similar proclamations so that the movement is truly a nationwide one.

At first the week was called Forest Protection week, but because of the magnitude of the forest problem, President Coolidge in 1925 enlarged the scope of the educational program and the more inclusive name of American Forest week was chosen. In recognition of the international scope of the forestry problem the authorities of the United States and Canada in 1926 jointly agreed that the week should be celebrated concurrently in the two countries. The Canadians call theirs "Save the Forests week," but its purpose and its observance is essentially the same as our American Forest week. The joint observance of the week was continued last year, and, as President Coolidge points out in this year's proclamation, our Canadian cousins have the dates April 22 to 28 marked in red on their calendars.

American Forest week is an annual call to all citizens, young and old, to take part in bringing about better forest conditions, its purpose is to give opportunity for every form of interest in trees and forests to find expression, each in its own way, and its aim is that the general welfare of the nation in respect to forestry may be promoted by the taking of common counsel, the formation of intelligent public opinion and the stimulation of action, individual and collective, under the impulse given by observance of the week. General supervision of plans for the week is under the direction of the American Forest week committee of which Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, is general chairman, and this committee is composed of representatives from nearly 100 organizations, representing every conceivable form of interest—the federal government, state governments, outdoor, wild life and recreational interests, foresters and forestry associations, the lumber industry, large consumers of forest products, organized labor, groups interested in the preservation of water resources, scientific and civic organizations, women's organizations and a host of others. Outstanding among these in carrying on forestry educational work not only during the seven days of American Forest week, but during the 365 days of the year is the American Tree association, of which the veteran worker for forest preservation, Charles Lathrop Pack, is president.

Although the forestry problem is so extensive in all its ramifications and there are so many angles to the question of how best to preserve this great natural resource and make it increasingly valuable to the nation, the prime necessity, as President Coolidge emphasizes in this year's proclamation, is the suppression of the fire hazard and the preservation of the forests which we already have even before steps can be taken for planning for the forests that are to be. Prevention of forest fires, especially unnecessary fires, is the one virtually important plank in the national forestry platform. While it is true that the original forest resources of this continent were sadly depleted by wasteful lumbering meth-

Forest Week Proclamation

FOR several years a special week has been set apart for public discussion of our forests and of what must be done to safeguard and restore them. Among the agencies making for progress in this direction, American Forest Week has proved its usefulness, and I am glad to proclaim it again and to announce that Canada is again concurrently observing a similar week.

The rehabilitation of our forests demands first of all that the forest fire evil be suppressed. Many of our forested states, with the cooperation of timberland owners, have undertaken organized protection against forest fires; and in recent years, under the Clarke-McNary law, the federal government has given its support to the movement. This great cooperative enterprise must be extended and strengthened until every forested county in the United States is safeguarded against forest fires.

But we are still far from the goal of complete protection. Every year, on the average, 80,000 fires scourge our woodlands, steadily undermining their vitality. For this bad situation, the blame falls equally on us all. Public agencies rarely provide adequate protection against fire, the timberland owner is too often indifferent to his property, the forest worker is too often neglectful of the future forest; the average citizen is too often careless with fire in the woods. We must all gain respect for the forest as that its destruction through indifference or carelessness shall be unthinkable.

We cannot permanently abuse our forests with impunity. The soil is the ultimate source of all our wealth and of life itself. One-fourth of our American soil is best suited for forests. Much of this land is already idle. More of it is being made idle by destructive logging and fire. Yet we cannot safely permit our forest land to lie fallow and useless any more than we can permit our farms and factories to lie idle.

To make our vast empire of forest land fully productive of continuous crops of timber will have momentous consequences in our national life. It will give agriculture the advantage of a new valuable crop. It will afford permanent employment to millions of men in the forest industries. It will furnish raw materials for many industries. It will furnish traffic for our railroads. It will maintain foreign and domestic commerce. It will restore our forests as conservers of soil and water, and as givers of health and pleasure to our people.

We already have made a beginning in forest renewal; but the task is stupendous, and we should permit no satisfaction over what has been done to blind us to the magnitude of what remains to be done.

Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate and set aside as American Forest Week the week beginning April 22 and ending April 28, in this year of 1928, I recommend to the governors of the various states that they also designate this week for special observance by their people; and that where practicable and not in conflict with law or custom, Arbor Day be observed during the course of the same week. I urge that during that week all citizens and appropriate organizations—including public officials, legislators, business organizations, educators, editors, clergymen, landowners, and others—give thought to the preservation and wise use of our forests, to the end that energetic forest policies will be adopted in all communities.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

ods in the past, foresters estimate that more timber has fallen before the flames than before the ax. Modern lumbering methods, based upon an intelligent understanding of future as well as present needs, have replaced the old extravagance, but the fire demon still exacts his dreadful toll and the acreage of forest land each year swept by forest fire is about twice the area cut over by logging operations.

For this situation, for the 80,000 fires which, in the words of the President, "scourge our woodlands, steadily undermining their vitality," the blame rests, as he says, upon every one of us, insofar as we are indifferent to our individual responsibility in improving conditions which will lessen the fire hazard. But most of all it rests upon the careless citizen who has the least right to go into the woods.

But, important as prevention of forest fires is, it is not the only forestry need which the educational program of American Forest week points out. Another highly important one is the necessity to replace the forests which have been destroyed by fire or logging operations with new forests and the way to fill this need is summed up in the simple watchword of "Plant trees!" Of all the organizations united in promoting American Forest week, few have done more in furthering this constructive work than the American Tree association. As before stated, this association is on the job with its educational work every day in the year.

Two years ago the association, to mark the semicentennial of the first step in forestry taken by the United States government, issued 100,000 copies of a Forestry Primer, a plain statement of the forestry situation in this country, which was distributed to schools throughout the country. Since that time the demand for the primer has so increased that now more than two million copies have been distributed to schools, organizations, scout leaders and women's clubs and it forms the basis for most of the American Forest week programs and special exercises. The association has also encouraged the planting of memorial groves and memorial trees along highways, dedicated to the memory of men who lost their lives in the World war. It has established a national honor roll in which such plantings are registered, as are trees planted in honor of various distinguished Americans. It has encouraged the planting of trees as a part of "city beautiful projects" of many municipalities and in many other ways has shown the individual citizen how he can have a part in this important undertaking of replacing our dwindling forests.

But the esthetic and sentimental aspects of tree planting are not the only ones which the American Tree association has fostered. It has had its share, too, along with such agencies as the United States forestry service, state and city forestry departments and the schools of forestry in our universities, in taking into account the economic factor in forest conservation. It has encouraged the planting of trees as a producing and profitable crop which should be added to our national agriculture. It was this economic angle of the situation which President Coolidge refers to in his proclamation when he says, "To make our vast empire of forest land fully productive of continuous crops of timber will have momentous consequences in our national life. It will give agriculture the advantage of a new valuable crop. It will afford permanent employment to millions of men in the forest industries. It will provide raw materials for many industries. It will furnish traffic for our railroads. It will maintain foreign and domestic commerce. It will restore our forests as conservers of soil and water, and as givers of health and pleasure to our people."

In that last sentence the President touched upon one vitally important point in the forestry program—the planting of trees as conservers of soil and water and factors in flood control. The necessity for such control is more apparent now than ever before in view of the disastrous floods which swept the Mississippi valley and New England last year. How the planting of trees will help solve the problem is summed up by President Pack of the American Tree association in the following words:

Flood waters of the Mississippi have directed the thought of the nation to means for preventing a similar disaster in the future. One of the agencies to that end is planting of the headwaters land of all streams flowing into this agricultural backbone of the nation to trees.

But there is another flood menace that bears directly on the future economic leadership of the United States and that is the flood of population. The experts give figures showing our population is increasing at the rate of a million a year.

This means a constantly increasing call on the forests for lumber. Forest products are the cornerstone of industry so let us do a twofold job in putting our millions of idle acres to work growing trees. They will help hold the water back and at the same time provide forests for the future. Planting of forests is the only phase of flood relief that will produce a revenue. All other measures will cost the taxpayers millions. Let us grow trees for a growing people.

So in the light of all these facts it is apparent that American Forest week is one of the most important of the whole 52 in this year 1928. Time was when the average American citizen was aware of such a thing as tree planting only on Arbor day and then only because he happened to hear his children talking about the Arbor day exercises in their schools. Arbor day is still an important day in our national calendar, but since its aim is essentially the same as that of American Forest week its observance is gradually becoming—and appropriately so—merged in the observance of American Forest week.

Lesson for April 8

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST (EASTER LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 16:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Because I live ye shall live also.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Comes to Life Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Christ Rises from the Grave.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus, Our Living Leader.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of the Resurrection.

I. The Ministry of Love (vv. 1-4).
1. By whom (v. 1). Mary Magdalene, the mother of James and Salome. They brought sweet spices with which to anoint Him.

2. When? (v. 2). Early in the morning of the first day of the week.
3. Their perplexity (vv. 3, 4). They questioned as to who should roll away the large stone from the mouth of the tomb. To their surprise they found the stone removed.

II. The Angel in the Tomb (vv. 5-8). Jesus knew that these women would come to the sepulcher with perplexed and unbelieving hearts so He had an angel waiting there to announce to them the fact of His resurrection. Note the angel's message:

1. "Be not afraid" (v. 6).

2. "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified" (v. 6). This threefold designation with marvelous clearness shows (1) His humanity—Jesus, (2) Lowly residence—Nazareth, (3) Ignominious death—crucified.

3. "He is risen; He is not here. Behold the place where they laid Him" (v. 6). These words throw light upon His birth, humility and shameful death. He who was born in lowly circumstances and suffered the shameful death on the cross, is now the conqueror of death. His resurrection gives meaning to His death. "If Christ be not risen your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. 15:17).

4. "Go your way, tell His disciples and Peter" (v. 7). As soon as it was known that Christ was risen from the dead they were to tell it to the disciples. The disciples all needed this blessed news, but Peter especially, since He had utterly denied Him.

5. "He goeth before you into Galilee, there shall ye see Him" (v. 7). Christ had told the disciples that He would rise from the dead and meet them in Galilee, but their unbelief kept them from this blessed truth.

III. The Appearances of the Risen Christ (vv. 9-14).

These appearances had as their object the restoration of the disciples from their awful failure and discouragement and convincing them without a peradventure of a doubt of Christ's resurrection. Since His resurrection was to be the central theme of apostolic preaching, it was necessary that they have a certainty of knowledge as to this matter (Acts 1:3). Without the resurrection of Christ His death would be meaningless. Out of the ten or more appearances, Mark selects three.

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 9-11). Mary's heart responded to the Savior who had graciously delivered her from demons. Her sufferings were no doubt terrible. She was first at the tomb; her devotion was amply rewarded by being first to meet the risen Lord. Though her faith was weak she went at once and told the story to the disciples.

2. To two disciples on the way to Emmaus (vv. 12, 13). Luke gives full particulars concerning this appearance (Luke 24:13-25). Jesus had walked, talked and eaten with them.

3. The eleven disciples (v. 14). Christ appeared to them while sitting at meat and reproved them for their unbelief. The fact that they steadfastly resisted the testimony that Christ had risen, and yet afterward were willing to risk their lives in the proclamation of this truth proves the genuineness of their faith.

IV. The Commission of the Risen Lord (vv. 15-18).

After the disciples were convinced of the truth of His resurrection, Christ sent them forth to "preach the gospel to every creature." What a glorious and supreme task is this. What a blessed issue to those who believe and how awful to them that believe not. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned" (v. 16).

V. The Activity of the Enthroned Christ (vv. 19, 20).

After giving the disciples their commission He ascended on high and from the unseen sphere directed their activities. Wherever they went He confirmed their word. He does the same for His disciples today.

Our Thoughts

We should manage our thoughts as shepherds do their flocks in making a garland; first, select the choicest, and then dispose them in the most proper places, that every one may reflect a part of its color and brightness on the next—Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

THE RETURN OF ANTHONY TRENT

CHAPTER I

The Purser Who Interested Himself in Crime.

That windy night only one passenger put out from Dover in the little wave-buffed tender to add his name to the many bound for New York in the waiting liner.

As he climbed the swaying ladder to the Brabant's deck, Anthony Trent was glad of this absence of scrutiny. More than three years absent from his native land, he was again about to place himself under her jurisdiction. He was conscious that after a long period of freedom from fear there was again an aura of uneasiness enveloping him. If there were those on board the Brabant waiting to arrest him they could choose their time. She was not a fast boat and there would be many days and nights to pass ere the highlands of Navesink came in sight.

Now that the tender had whistled her farewell and was on her way, no escape was possible. For six days he would be as carefully imprisoned as though the walls of an impregnable jail rose around him.

The chief steward was summoned early to Trent's stateroom.

"I want my meals served here," Trent said. "and I want to see the passenger list in case any of my friends are aboard."

There was not a name on the passenger list which awakened old memories. And there was not a man among the ship's officers he remembered. Apparently Anthony Trent, once known as the master criminal, had come as a stranger aboard a strange ship. The thought was curiously comforting. In a week he would be looking over the treetops of Central park after an absence of four years.

Four years! It was as a soldier he had left America. What vivid years they had been since the Leviathan pulled out of her Hoboken dock and took him and thousands more to France. He had fought. He had been decorated for valor in the field. He had put the old life, outside the law, behind him. And then when the war was over he had gone to England; he had found happiness there, and then one black day he had lost it. It was a man no longer in love with life who journeyed back to his native land and desired solitude.

When the passengers observed Anthony Trent and were not able to recognize him in the dining-saloon here were many questions asked about him. The overtures that were made were all courteously rejected. It was plain he walked the decks for exercise, not companionship. At thirty-four Trent was a presentable figure of a man. He carried himself uncommonly well, but there was little of the drawing-room exquisite in his slender figure. The trainer of athletes would have seen in his straight and spare figure one of those slender men whose muscles were wire strung, whose nerves were perfectly attuned to uncommon effort, and whose physical courage was high.

On the second evening out came the first disagreeable incident of the voyage. Trent was sitting in a chair before his open door puffing at a big briar pipe. He looked up as an officer passed. It was the purser, whom he had not hitherto noticed, and as there was about the purser's manner an indication that he desired to chat, Trent seized the moment when the officer spoke for a moment to a passing sailor, to shut his door.

A little later there was a tap on the panel. Trent knew it was the purser.

"Come in," he shouted.

The purser was a man of middle age and of middle stature. He had a shrewd, quizzical face, humorous and strong; and there was a touch of the bulldog in his chin.

"I was almost sure I smelled Hankey," he said, smiling as he looked at the red-labeled tin on the table, "and my heart warmed toward those who know that mixture. I hope you don't think I'm taking a liberty?"

"Glad to see you," Trent said, and truthfully, "sit down and fill up."

His manner was thoroughly amiable. It was as though a lonely man welcomed the prospect of a chat with another. In truth, Anthony Trent was disquieted. He could not feel sure that the purser had followed a trail of Hankey's mixture all over the ship and run it to ground as he was explaining. But the odds were that there was nothing to be alarmed about. If the officer had any unstated reason Trent wanted to know as soon as possible.

"Comfortable here, I trust?" asked the purser.

"Couldn't be more so. I usually travel on the big boats for the reason one assumes they are more comfortable, but I've evidently been wrong."

"This trip is a sort of holiday for me," the purser said. "I've been on the big ones for twenty years and I'd gone stale. A great school for studying life," the purser mused. "a ship is, which is only 12,500 tonnage, is fuller of strange people than a city with ten times its population. But perhaps these things don't interest you?"

"What sort of things?"

"Crime in general. Crime has always interested me," the purser went on genially, "and I've seen a lot of it. I suppose a man like me sees as much of clever crookdom as a detective.

"I'll have some more tobacco if I may." "Help yourself," Trent said cordially. He seemed unperturbed. "I'm interested in crime only if the crime or criminal is unusual."

"The trouble with a purser's life is that he often sees just a chapter of crime," mused his caller.

Trent puffed steadily at his pipe. Although he was convinced that this talk of crime was but a pretext and the purser's visit made for some purpose unknown, there was no tell-tale twitch of any facial muscle to betray his uneasiness. For the first time for more than two years he felt he was in danger, and, as always, he called forth his reserve of strength and waited the outcome unflinching.

The purser went on: "Sometimes the chapters that open so promisingly turn out most disappointing. Once in Liverpool. It was on the Poltania. Just as we were starting a young man jumped overboard."

"Was he drowned?"

"No. He jumped onto the landing stage unhurt. That was a curious case, Mr. Trent. He had engaged one of the best staterooms aboard. It was filled with his baggage, and he had even selected his seat at the table and tipped his stewards. Of course he may have done that to give strength to the theory that his action was unpremeditated. A clever crook would think of such things. But I wirelessly to the office and found out that he had satisfied them. He had either seen the face, or heard the voice of a long-lost relative and jumped down twelve feet to make sure of it. Some said the man was a crook who saw a detective he feared, and jumped overboard to escape him. Others that he had heard the voice of the wife he had deserted. I said to myself that some day I should get all the information I needed, and see the last episode of that serial." The purser leaned forward and tapped Trent's knee. "Mr. Trent, just why did you risk a broken leg that evening in Liverpool?"

It was characteristic of Trent that he was ready to face danger when he saw it. At all costs he must not evade it now. The purser, who was a resolute and educated man, was possessed of some knowledge he had not yet told Trent, which had directly to do with his safety. His smile had no anxiety in it. What the purser told him seemed to be of no special interest.

"I have almost forgotten the incident," he remarked. "It was three years ago almost."

"Less," said the purser, "a good bit less."

"Maybe you are right," Trent conceded, "and in any case you seem to recall it to mind more readily than I."

The purser sighed a little. It seemed almost as though he were disappointed. And, oddly enough, the keen searching look gave place to one of kindness.

"Mr. Trent," he said earnestly, "I hoped you would have threatened to kick me out of your stateroom. A man who had nothing to fear would have done that. You may or may not believe me, but I wish you had been such a man. I wish you had asked me angrily what the devil your business had to do with me. Instead you have not shown any anger at all. Mr. Trent, that is the action of a man who is afraid."

Trent still preserved his air of ease. But he was wondering how it was the official had come so close to the truth. He would have given a great deal to have been able to betray genuine anger. And he did not understand why the purser seemed to be sorry for his plight.

As in other days, the atmosphere of danger was about him. And he was in that inescapable thing, a ship crossing the Atlantic.

"You have not yet told me all you know."

"I know about Captain Sutton," said the purser gravely.

Trent's action in stooping to strike a match on his shoe's heel was to gain a momentary respite. He did not know quite what his face revealed to the observer. Captain Sutton was the only man alive—so far as he knew—who had definite knowledge that Anthony Trent had won the title "master criminal" by a series of crimes so unique and skillful that he had never been in the toils of justice. Two other men had known—Austin the butler, whose grave was marked by one of a row of white crosses in France, and Devlin, the detective, who had closed his lips as death approached, and left Trent secure.

"Captain Sutton," he echoed. "Are you talking of my old adjutant?"

"I am talking of the Capt. Frank Sutton whom you saw on the Poltania, and jumped overboard to escape."

Trent was silent for a moment. He knew Sutton was proud of him for the mention in dispatches and the Croix de Guerre he had won to the honor of the regiment. Sutton had promised him that he would say nothing. Why, then, this talk of the former adjutant? He turned to his visitor.

"I don't yet know your name," he said.

"Warne," said the purser, "Brunion Warne."

"Then listen to me a moment, Mr. Warne. When I tell you I did not know Captain Sutton was aboard I am speaking the truth. If I had known he was a passenger I should have been delighted to see him. Springing overboard was one of the most unpremeditated things I ever did. I heard underneath me the voice of a man who saved my life. That I swear on my honor."

"Explain why Sutton jumped to your rescue so ardently when your motives were attacked in the smoking-room. I don't mind telling you we all thought you a crook, and said so. Captain Sutton constituted himself your counsel, and actually smacked Colliver, the Troy millionaire, across the mouth because he continued to dwell on the subject."

"Dear old Sutton," Anthony Trent said gratefully. "He has been a good friend to me. Some day I hope I shall be able to repay him."

"When the Poltania reached quarantine, Captain Sutton, your friend, was arrested. He is now in Sing Sing prison. Embezzlement and attempted murder were the charges."

Trent was stricken dumb. Sutton had never been an intimate friend. Rather he recalled him as a benefactor. He had known him as a wealthy man of vast interests secured by position and fortune from the temptations incidental to poverty. To learn he was found guilty of embezzlement and murder, or attempted murder, came as a shock, a blow of tremendously devastating power.

"I see your point of view," Trent said presently. "Are you working against me?"

"Not for a moment," Warne answered. "If there's one thing that would please me, it would be to find I've been barking up a wrong tree."

Anthony Trent was now superbly at ease.

"My dear Mr. Warne," he said urbanely, "you have been barking up a wrong tree this time, although no doubt as a rule you don't waste your efforts. It amounts to this. You think my knowledge of the embezzler, Captain Sutton, suspicious. Is that all?"

"Well, there was your method of leaving the Poltania," the other man said, almost apologetically.

"Apart from that there is nothing else?"

"Absolutely none." The purser's air was quite apologetic.

Persian City Leads in Production of Henna

An important industry of Yezd, Persia, is the manufacture of henna. This product is used to wash and color the hair and to stain the finger nails red—yes, many people here have red finger nails. I saw colored lambs, and several horses whose manes and fetlocks were dyed red with henna.

Henna leaves come from the south, principally from the Bam district, and Yezd supplies all Persia and the surrounding countries with this dye. The 30 or more henna mills in the city are so completely inclosed that it is difficult to see what goes on within.

In the late evening a camel, covered with henna dust, operates the mill, plodding in a circle in the half darkness. A small round basket covers his eyes to prevent him from getting dizzy. One receives an impression of an reality, of something brought from another world.

The mill is very primitive, standing about six feet high, while the mill stone and the circular path around it are sunken. Everything is covered with henna dust. From time to time a little boy shovels the powder into heavy jugs.—Bernhard Kellermann in Berliner Tageblatt (Living Age).

Idly Drawn Scrawls Reveal State of Mind

Weird and ugly faces absent-mindedly scribbled on paper indicate a troubled state of mind, points out Louise Rice, a teacher of graphology, in an article in Liberty Magazine.

"Mental conditions which are going wrong," writes Miss Rice, "nearly always result in the making of weird and ugly 'faces,' death's-heads, yawning mouths with prodigious teeth, and other unpleasant formations which show that the hand fears that which is going on in the dark recesses of the mind."

"The hand knows much about a man's mental and physical states, which he does not," the writer explains. "Confusion in scribbles, when they have usually been well defined and when there is no mental troubles felt, shows nervous conditions which are apt to break out, sometimes long after the information has been conveyed by this symbolism."

France Eyes Reindeer as Beasts of Burden

Reindeer may become used extensively in place of oxen and horses in the mountain districts of France, if the experiments, just agreed upon, of raising them in the Haute Savoie district proves a success. The French ministry of agriculture has granted a subsidy to a society to help it with its reindeer farm.

It may come as a surprise to many to know that reindeer are actually in use already in one town in France, so that the Lapps will not be the only ones in Europe to hear reindeer bells in villages. If one takes the train from Annecy, where the lake is intensely blue, to Chamonix, at the foot of Mont Blanc, he will pass through the village of Megeve. Should it be in the season of snow and should he care to descend, he would be likely to see reindeer drawing sledges.—Exchange.

Radio Tests Paper

Another practical use for radio has been announced by Maine paper manufacturers, who have been employing it to test the quality (thinness, thickness, dampness) of paper produced. A radio fan, experimenting with paper to throw the set out of tune, discovered that the thickness, or other characteristics of the paper, produced a measurable difference in the regulation of the dial. The result has been the installation in several paper plants of a specially prepared radio apparatus on the paper machines to test the moisture content of papers, the radio reporting to the machine tender whether the paper is being dried to the exact extent required.

Overflow Audiences Greet Ruth Hanna McCormick

Having completed her state-wide tour in which she traveled 13,000 miles by automobile in the past five months, Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican candidate for Congressman-at-large in the April primaries is devoting the remaining days of the campaign in speaking before the Cook County voters and in a few of the near-by cities. Overflow audiences have greeted her everywhere and she is receiving the enthusiastic endorsement of the leading men and women organizations in Cook County.

Mrs. McCormick impresses her audiences everywhere with the forcefulness of her logic, her keen understanding of the state and national problems confronting the country and her ability to present her views in a clear concise and most sincere manner. In a mass meeting at the Four Cohans Theatre at noon on Friday, March 30th, which opened her campaign in Cook County, crowds eager to hear this able woman candidate were turned away after the theatre had been filled to capacity.

"I am an American—I am not a pacifist", stated Mrs. McCormick in this opening address. "I prophesy that in five years we will have a multilateral treaty with all the leading nations of the world outlawing war. Nations can outlaw war and that is the way war will stop."

While she believes in an adequate program of national defense and urges that the United States build and maintain an army, navy and air forces which shall be second to no other in the world, Mrs. McCormick is opposed to the United States entering what she calls a competitive building program with the other nations.

PIPE AND BX

Here are some of the methods of wiring buildings for electricity: Rigid Conduit (Pipe) Armored Cable (BX) and knob and tube (open wiring). All of these methods of wiring will give results, but pipe or Bx are far the best. Open wiring should be a thing of the past because in most cases it is unsafe.

There are two kinds of pipe, black and galvanized. We use only galvanized pipe which will give many more years of service. In all our work we endeavor to build for permanence, not just to last a year or two.

Having your buildings wired in pipe or Bx does not necessarily mean that they are wired good or that they are safe. See next week's advertisement for further information.

ORLAND PARK

PARENT-TEACHERS MEETING

The Orland Park Lions Club called a meeting of the parents and teachers Thursday night for the purpose of organizing a Parent-Teachers organization. Rev. Sanders and Rev. Gorey composed the committee from the Lions Club to work up the meeting. The meeting was called to order by Rev. Sanders who acted as chairman.

Mrs. Hopkins of Oak Lawn representing the State Parent-Teachers Association addressed the meeting telling of the work and purpose of the organization. After her address it was voted to organize a local Parent-Teachers Association, affiliated with the State organization. Mrs. Hopkins effected the organization. The officers elected were: President, Mrs. Adelle Cooper; Vice-President, Mrs. L. Arnold; Secretary, Mrs. Rust; Treasurer, Mrs. Knox.

Those present were signed up as 30 charter members. The president Mrs. Cooper is working on the organization. The next meeting will be Wednesday, April 11 at 8 p. m. in the high school auditorium. Mrs. Edmonds of LaGrange, the district chairman, will be at the next meeting. All the parents of the community both fathers and mothers are invited and urged to attend.

Kite Flying Contest Being Planned

Rev. Sanders is planning a kite flying contest for the boys of the Junior Scouts and the small boys of Orland Park community. The kites must be made by the boys themselves. The prize will be given for the best made kite that will fly the highest. There will also be a contest at Worth and the one who wins in each community will compete for the intercommunity prize.

ATHLETIC CLUB GROWING

The senior boys athletic club under the direction of Rev. Povenmire is rapidly increasing in numbers. The boys and young men are divided in two groups. The boys have the gymnasium from 7-8:30 and the young men from 8:30 to 10 p. m. They have the use of the M. E. church gymnasium in Blue Island every Saturday evening.

It is hoped that we may have a community house and gymnasium in connection with the church before a great while so the boys may stay in the community. There is a great need for this and it could be done without a great expense. It would be a real investment in the life of the boys and the community.

SUNDAY SERVICE IMPRESSIVE

The Palm Sunday service at the Orland M. E. church was a very impressive service. There was a new arrangement of the altar which lent much dignity to the service.

The new Bible given by the adult Bible Class was dedicated. It is a very fine Bible, the finest that could be had.

There are plans for a special Easter Morning service and in the evening the cantata of the Resurrection will be given by the senior choir.

WORTH

The Worth Community Church has established a tradition for its Easter Sunday services. They are the high tide of the community life. This Easter Sunday morning there will be the Sunrise service celebrating the resurrection. There will be special music and the Easter story by Rev. Sanders. This is a very beautiful service and is a fitting beginning for Easter Sunday.

The morning service will be at 11 A. M. It will be a very beautiful service and as is the custom in the Easter service, there will be an opportunity for those who wish to join the fellowship of the church to do so at that time. The whole community is invited to the service. Rev. Sanders will have a special message for the day.

Worth has a new refreshment parlor which is not the kind usually found at the cross roads. Mr. Preller in cooperation with Mr. Jensen has built a modern lunch room and refreshment parlor, at the corner of 111th and Harlem Ave. They have spent a good deal of money fixing up and decorating the place. It is very beautifully done inside and is equipped with a modern fountain and all the things that go to make a first class place. It also gives very home like appearance with its comfortable chairs and radio. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen seem to treat the place as a home which gives it added charm.

FREE WILL COUNTY OF CRIME

That is the battle-cry of ELMER H. BIELFELDT, candidate for the Republican Nomination for State's Attorney who has pledged himself to DRIVE CRIME OUT OF WILL COUNTY and KEEP IT OUT.

Bielfeldt, a successful attorney, was born in Beecher, Illinois, and has lived in Will County ALL his life. He served with distinction in the World War and has the respect and confidence of the people of Will County.

He is independent of any group or faction and, if elected, will be under obligation to the PEOPLE OF WILL COUNTY and to no one else. He will not use the great power of his office, directly or indirectly, for personal gain, but he WILL USE IT to drive crime out of Will County and keep it out. He will ENFORCE THE LAWS impartially without regard to race, creed, color OR CLASS, AND WITHOUT COMPROMISE.

ANSWERING MR. REHN

During the campaign, the present State's Attorney-Hjalmar Rehn—has been "broadcasting" what he calls his "Record of Achievement". Therefore, it is only fair to answer some of his statements.

Mr. Rehn claims that he has collected "fines and costs" to the amount of $104,597.52 during his term of office.

His reports filed in the Circuit Clerk's Office of Will County show that he has turned into the County treasury (to March 20th, 1928) a total of $84,987.52, more than $10,000 of which was a bond forfeiture taken in his predecessor's administration and prosecuted by him to final judgment in the Appellate Court.

If Mr. Rehn's statement is true, where is the "missing" $19,610? Who has it?

Mr. Rehn claims that the former sheriff refused to serve warrants issued by him.

If so, why did not Mr. Rehn prosecute the sheriff, which he should have done under his oath of office? If any sheriff does not do his duty the State's Attorney should prosecute him.

Mr. Rehn takes great credit for having prosecuted the Klein slayers. Yet, when the Klein murder case was taken to the Supreme Court, there was paid $1542.91 out of the county funds to a prominent Joliet attorney for doing the work he, himself should have done.

Why doesn't Mr. Rehn tell about his part in the "election fraud" settlement, where four men pleaded guilty, and with his consent and agreement were fined no more than $300.00?

Mr. Rehn boasts that his office has not cost the county anything in that the fines and costs were more than ample to pay for the conduct of his office and that the surplus has gone to the distributable school fund.

The records of the County Superintendent of Schools show that for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1927 that not one dollar was turned into the distributable school fund from fees, fines, forfeitures and penalties.

The same record shows that for the fiscal years June 30, 1920 to July 1, 1924 and under Mr. Rehn's predecessor there was turned into the distributable school fund from fees, fines, forfeitures and penalties $86,475.00.

Mr. Rehn also failed to file with the Court of Claims any claim for the $20,997.50, which the Klein cases cost Will County, and, for this reason, the County has stood the cost which, under the law, should be borne by the State of Illinois. The members of the Legislature endeavored to secure the money after Rehn's negligence but were unsuccessful because the claim had not been presented to the Court of Claims.

Mr. Rehn claims he has "cleaned up" Will County. If so, why are the law violating elements supporting him in this campaign?

Conditions in this country have reached a point where either LAW or CRIME must prevail. Compromise is IMPOSSIBLE. The State's Attorney is the most important law-enforcing officer in Will County. He must be a man who is under obligation to no one, who has no affiliation, directly or indirectly, with law violators. He must have ability, courage and independence. He must have the confidence and respect of the people. Elmer Bielfeldt is such a man.

Unless an ordinance adopted by a city council is published in full, it cannot be enforced, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom declared in response to a query from Dr. Isaac Rawlings, director of the state department of health. Acting on authority granted by the legislature, Doctor Rawlings drew up an ordinance for the regulation of plumbing, which he proposed for action by city councils. It consisted of forty-five pages of printed matter. The health director asked if part could be printed and the rest filed and proceed to enforce the ordinance.

Attorney General Carlstrom has decided that funds collected under the recently invalidated gasoline tax law can be appropriated for use on Illinois roads. The fund in the state treasury which amounts to $6,137,541.42 is there subject to such appropriation by the general assembly. Those who paid the gas tax without protest have no means of recovering it, according to the opinion of the attorney general announced a few days ago. Those who paid under protest have a remedy in chancery, and can secure an injunction to prevent the transfer.

The Illinois Soldiers' and Sailors' home at Quincy, to which the veterans of all the country's wars and their widows are eligible for admission, had received up until July 1, 1927, 12,692 men and since 1908, when women were first admitted to the home, 1,066 women. The Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' home at Normal has sheltered more than 7,000 boys and girls since it was first established in 1860. The educational system includes kindergarten, eight grades of elementary work and high school. Vocational training may be substituted for the high school course if a pupil so desires. Sports and athletics of all kinds, Boy Scout and Girl Reserve organization, moving pictures, holiday entertainments, outings and picnics are provided for the children.

The following bridge and pavement contracts have been awarded by the state division of highways:

Route 64, section 126B, Kane county, bridge; to Iowa Bridge company, Des Moines, $11,436.74.
Route 116, section 107, Woodford county, pavement; to W. D. Lonergan, Jacksonville, $86,203.75.
Route 117, section 113, Woodford county, pavement; to W. D. Lonergan, Jacksonville, $86,304.18.
Route 11, section 45, Clark county, pavement; to J. W. Etchinson, Casey, $57,432.77.
Route 88, section 123, Stark county, pavement; to Central Engineering company, Iowa, $191,090.40.

Pioneers of central Illinois will be the guests of honor at Elmhurst on May 27 when the Lorado Taft statue, "The Pioneers," is formally unveiled. The famous Illinois sculptor and his family plan to be present at the dedication. Hamlin Garland, New York novelist, is to give the dedicatory address. The statue depicts a young pioneer, musket in hand and dog at his side, standing beside his wife with baby in arms.

Bids for the construction of hard roads were received by the state department of highways on April 4 for Macoupin, Saline and McLean counties. In addition to the roads, the department also received bids for the construction of necessary stretches along the routes, and also for approaches to the new bridge at Pekin.

Establishment of the four high school classes in a non-high school district relieves residents of the district from paying the non-high school tax, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled. The attorney general was asked by J. C. Howard, Olney, whether such a district is liable to a non-high school tax, after adding the four required grades to make up an accredited course.

The library at the Illinois State reformatory now numbers approximately nine thousand volumes, over seven thousand of which are given out each month. The library at the Illinois State penitentiary consists of about twenty-three thousand books and the reading averages about four thousand volumes a month.

Efforts to bring electricity to more people in Illinois—especially the farmers—and its use as a reducer of labor and an increaser of wages were the chief subjects considered and discussed at the annual convention of the state electric association held in Springfield recently.

Money appropriated by county boards of supervisors for the county highway fund may be used in payment for a right-of-way for hard roads regardless of the method by which the right-of-way was procured, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled. His opinion, given at the request of the state's attorney of Madison county, said that the fund could be used for purchasing right-of-way whether the road was a state aid or other road, and whether or not it was acquired by a compromise of a condemnation proceedings.

The following contracts for pavement, bridges and grading have been awarded by the state division of highways:

Route 147, section 122A, Pulaski county, grading; to J. J. McCaughey, Chicago, $115,099.95.
Route 160, section 132, Madison county, pavement; Madison Construction company, Edwardsville, $107,910.05.
Route 160, section 133, Madison county, pavement; Madison Construction company, Edwardsville, $155,089.95.
Route 116, section 103, Tazewell-Woodford counties, pavement; L. B. Dyer Construction company, Hoopes-ton, $98,354.29.
Route 116, section 102, Tazewell county, pavement; L. B. Dyer Construction company, Hoopes-ton, $98,354.29.
Route 56, section 561B, DuPage county, bridge; Ferguson Construction company, Rockford, $28,743.79.
Route 158, section 133A, St. Clair county, grading; Kiefner and Gelle, Perryville, $17,574.28.

Winning out over 811 other herds tested in the thirty-three dairy herd improvement associations, seven purebred Holsteins owned by Charles McLean, Greenville, last month captured the high herd honors of the state with a production of 1,528 pounds of milk and 53.3 pounds of fat for each cow. Announcement of the top herd was made by C. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

State Highway No. 13, the short line from Shawneetown and intermediate points to St. Louis, will be thrown open to all-weather traffic early in May, the state highway department has announced. Route 13 is known as the Logan highway and runs through the counties of Gallatin, Saline, Williamson, Jackson, Perry, Randolph and St. Clair.

A seed corn report somewhat better than the disheartening ones of the past few springs in Illinois is reported by J. C. Hackleman, crops extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, after germination tests on 468 samples of corn from various sections of the state. Only in the southern and west central portions of the state was seed corn found to be so far below normal that farmers must use caution in getting supplies for spring planting, Hackleman reported. Seed from central and northern Illinois, including the heaviest corn producing areas, was found to be generally good.

Sixty-seven agricultural fairs will be held in Illinois this year, a much shorter season than usual, according to dates announced by J. S. Stanard, director of the state department of agriculture. "Of the seventy-eight district and county fairs which participate in state funds, sixty-six have scheduled their dates and with the exception of the winter fair held at Sycamore, all are in July, August and September."

In closing a series of seven dairy meetings in as many central Illinois communities, W. S. O'Hair, president of the Illinois State Dairyman's association, reported that Illinois is recording greater progress in the dairy industry at this time than it ever has had within his knowledge of twenty years' service.

A recent road hearing conducted in the state arsenal at Springfield has brought forth the announcement that several roads in the vicinity of the capital city are slated for construction as a part of the 1928 road building campaign in the state. The roads on which action is expected soon are: Route 104 from Auburn to Taylorville; Route 124 from Springfield to Route 24, north of Cantrall; Route 123 from Ashland to Tallula; and Route 126 from Springfield to Litchfield.

Express service by airplane will soon be a reality between St. Louis and Chicago if plans of the American Express company materialize. Within the next thirty days this airplane service is expected to be started and will augment the trans-continental express service. In addition to the St. Louis-Chicago route, a line between St. Louis and Kansas City will be started.

Fast automobiles and express trains were not fast enough for one aspirant to political office so he has taken to the airplane. A. T. Spivey, editor of the East St. Louis Journal and candidate for congressman-at-large, has transportation to commute between St. Louis and his Chicago headquarters.

Seven thousand fish from the state hatcheries at Havana have been transferred to the lake in Walton park in the south end of the city of Litchfield. The transfer of the fish was supervised by State Representative M. E. Brady, who was instrumental in having the fish sent to Litchfield.

With the fly season just around the corner the time for doing the most effective work toward keeping this pestiferous insect out of the dining room and kitchen is right now, according to Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health department. Screens and swatters are great things after flies arrive but a thorough cleaning of horse stables and the weekly cleaning from now on until frost next autumn, the burying of all manure, the cleaning up of all rubbish and filth will destroy the breeding places of flies. One lick now is worth a dozen later.

PORK DISHES

We like and use much pork. The average cook serves pork roast, chops, ham and bacon, which exhausts her repertoire. Did you ever serve a crown roast of pork? If not it is worth trying.

Pork to have a delicate flavor should be cooked with proper seasonings. Here is a method which will taste nearly as good as chicken: Select a piece from the loin of about two to three pounds. Cover with boiling water, using two quarts; add two stalks of celery, a small green pepper, half an onion and one carrot—all cut fine; two sprigs of parsley, one clove, one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of peppercorns and simmer slowly for two hours or, better, three. Add more salt and cool the meat. Serve it sliced in thin slices.

Mock Chicken Salad.—To one cupful of cold diced pork add three hard-cooked eggs, one-half cupful of diced celery, one-fourth cupful of cooked string beans and one teaspoonful of minced parsley. Marinate with French dressing for an hour, drain and moisten with mayonnaise. Arrange on a platter lined with lettuce. Garnish with rings of green pepper and slices of tomato that have been marinated in French dressing.

Crown Roast.—Select a rack of pork which is not too heavy and have six or eight ribs cut from each side. Trim the ribs as usual, without separating them; then the two sections are put together with the ribs outside, skewered and tied. Cover the ends of the ribs with salt pork, dust with salt, pepper and sage. Roast in a hot oven for two and three-fourths hours, basting frequently. When done remove the pork cubes and cover the ribs with paper frills. Set on a hot platter and pile the center high with small cooked apples, cooked in sirup until tender but unbroken. The apple sirup is cooked down and then the apples are cooled in it until it jellies.

Baked Pork Chop.—Dip each chop in egg and crumbs and brown in hot fat. Place in a hot baking dish, dust with salt, pepper and poultry dressing. Place on each chop a red apple cored but not peeled and cut into half crosswise. Pour over the chops one-half cupful of boiling water and set into the oven to bake until tender, adding more water if needed. Serve with a sprig of parsley on top of each apple.

Tomatoes are being recognized as a vegetable exceedingly valuable to the baby as well as to the adult. The juice is given to very young children as well as the better known and appreciated orange juice.

Salads, Salad Dressings.

A salad dressing is of the most importance. With a mayonnaise as a foundation one may evolve innumerable delightful dressings.

French dressing is another good foundation for many different dressings. Kept ready mixed in a pint jar, which may be well shaken before using, one may add chopped vegetables, condiments of various kinds, cheese and other foods to add flavor and make many varieties.

When one wishes a substantial dish the following will be a good salad to serve:

Luncheon Salad.—Take a head of crisp fresh lettuce and one cupful of finely cut celery cut into julienne strips. Take one-fourth pound of smoked beef tongue, cut in the same way; add one pimiento, also cut into small strips, as well as a cooked egg white. When ready to serve line the salad bowl with crisp lettuce leaves, mix together the beef tongue, celery, pimiento and egg white; dress with:

Parisienne Dressing.—Take one cupful of French dressing, add the yolk of a hard-cooked egg mashed, a teaspoonful each of minced parsley and tarragon vinegar with paprika to make it quite red. Beat well and serve well chilled.

Swiss Salad.—Take one head of lettuce, one cupful of cooked string beans cut into halves lengthwise, then in inch lengths. Peel and chill four medium-sized tomatoes and cut into quarters. Cut four slices of bacon into dice and cook until brown. Mix all together and garnish with the quartered tomatoes. Serve with a sour cream dressing. Beat a cupful of heavy sour cream, add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, and a speck of white pepper and paprika. Chill well before serving.

WOMEN GETTING BALD

The next five years will show women with Bald Heads, or going in that direction. Men attribute it to Heredity. What will the women say is the cause for it? Thousands of young men bald, or going that way, who had no need for getting bald or even scarce of hair. You surely can give one or two minutes each day to take care of your hair. This is all the time required. You owe this to Nature, as it was given to us in the beginning by Nature. Grow hair on your Bald Head. Grow new hair, destroy dandruff by improving the condition of the scalp which feeds the hair. Then you have the problem solved.

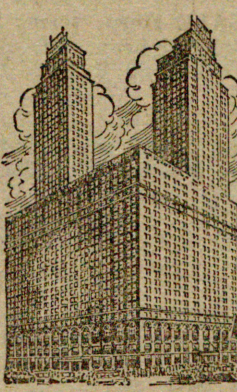

Forst's Original BARE-TO-HAIR is not a tonic, but is a scalp fertilizer and germicide. The results from its use has really created its own demand over the entire country. Literature and information sent upon request.

In the Day's Work

The Mississippi River was rising sullenly, inundating wide areas of farm lands and making thousands homeless.

At one of the many towns a break came, spreading ruin through the streets. A government steamer rescued 900 refugees, but the four telephone operators refused to forsake their posts. Friends warned them to leave at once. They decided to remain on duty, and the exchange was the only thing in town that continued to carry on.

The world hears little of "the spirit of service" until times of emergency and disaster. But behind the scenes this spirit is always present, and telephone users confidently rely upon the loyalty and devotion to duty of the men and women who make this service possible. "Get the message through." That is the daily work of the more than 310,000 Bell System employees.

Light up....for health!

AT STUDY and at play, children's eyes must be protected. They need enough light and the right kind of light. Gloom and glare are equally dangerous. Defective vision, aggravated by poor light, handicaps one-fourth of all the children in American schools. For your children's sake—and also for your own comfort and health—be sure the light is right.

Lighting Information Service

Our lighting specialists will be glad to study your particular needs and suggest ways in which you can secure the best lighting effects. This advisory service is free. Call in or phone us.
